He once stayed outside my house waiting for me to come home. When I did, he cried and threw himself to the floor and begged me to go back to him.

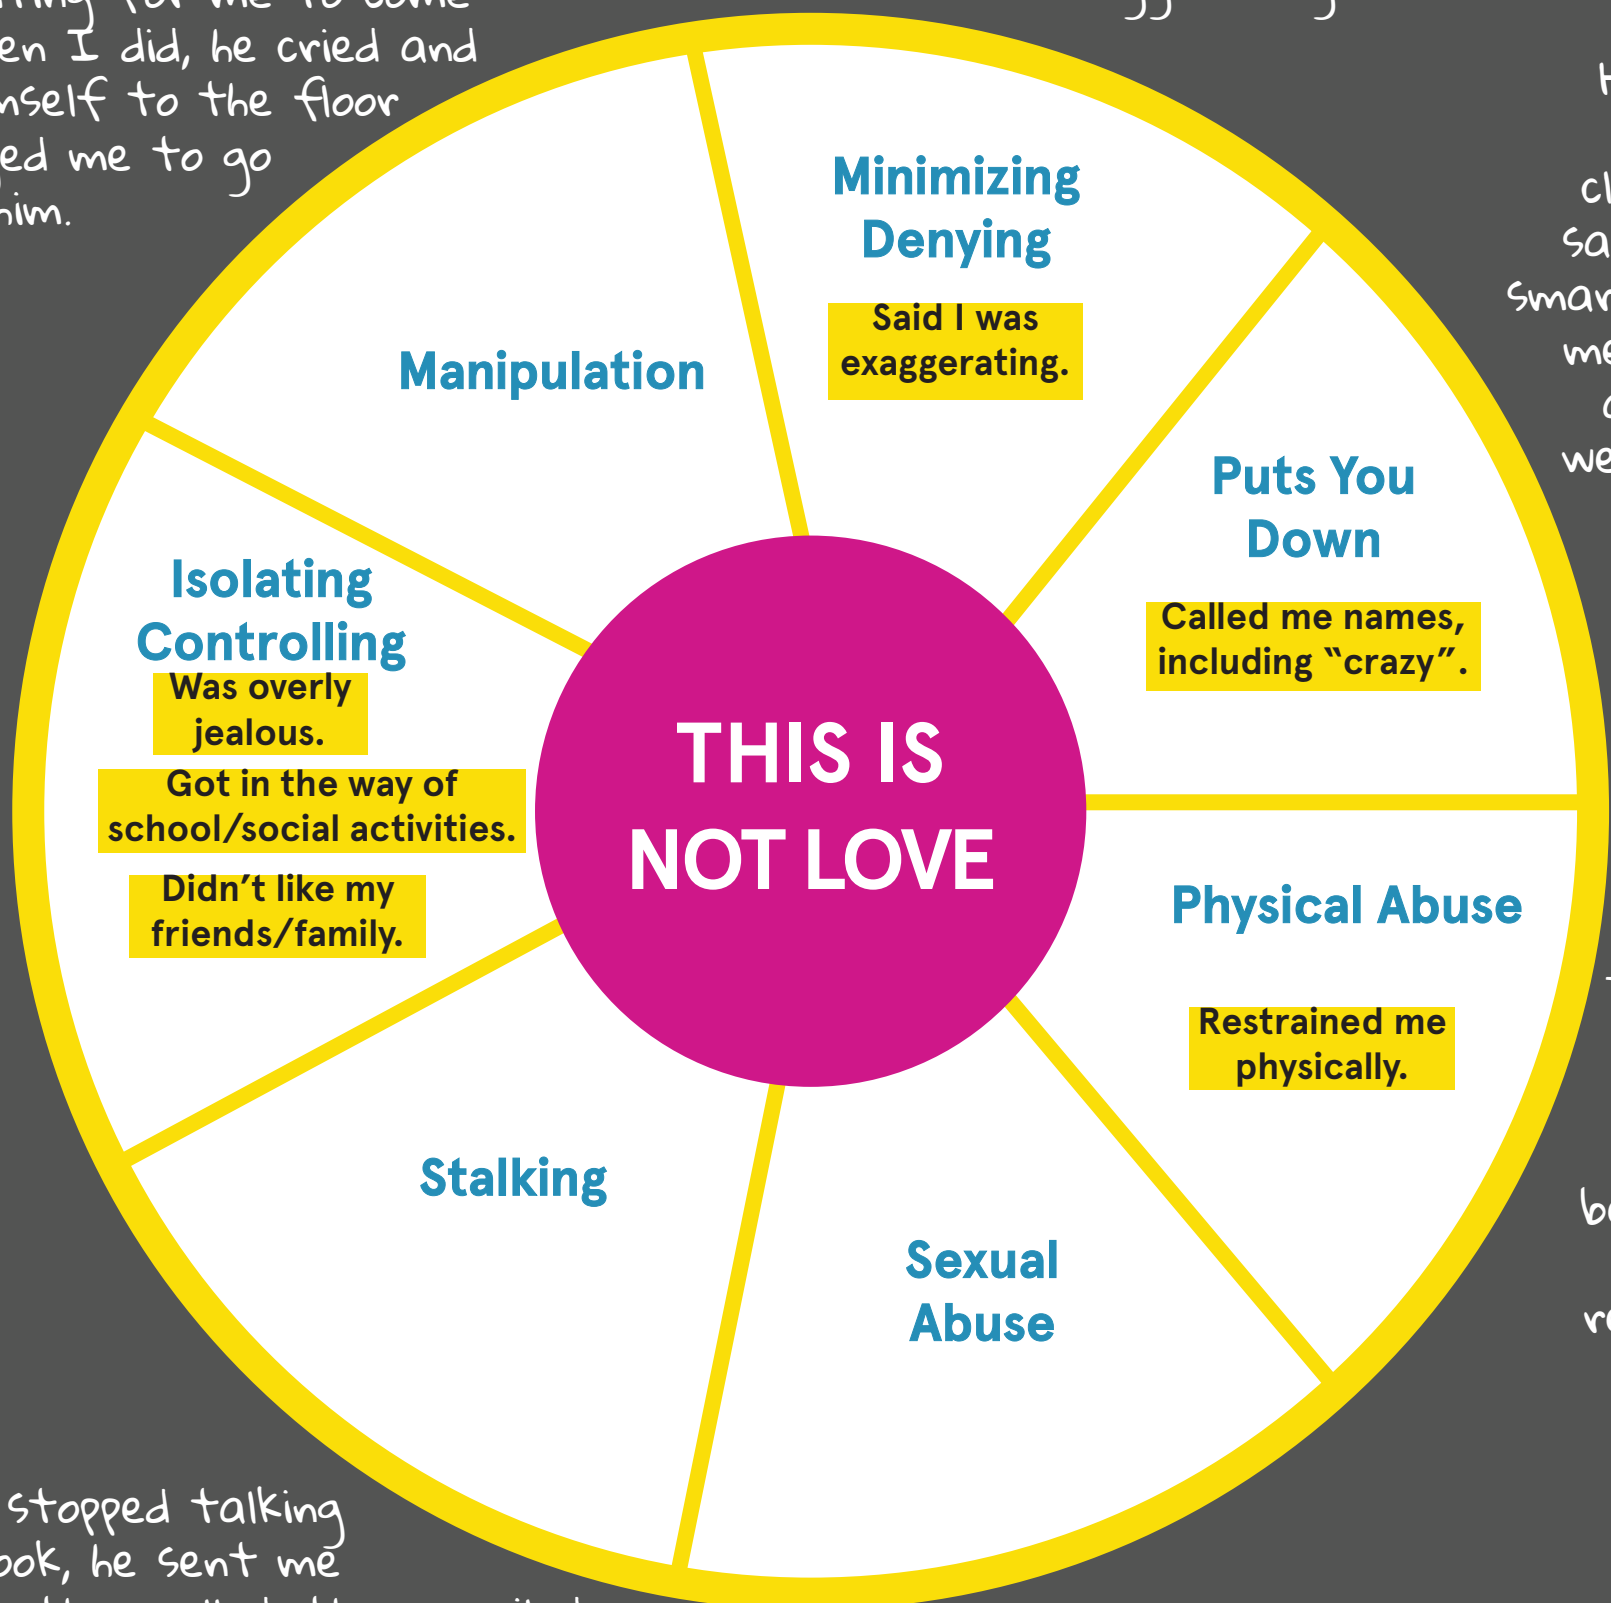

When I said there was abuse in our relationship, he got offended and said I was exaggerating it.

He always called me clumsy and said he was smarter than me. He said all women were crazy, including me.

The first time we kissed it was because he physically restrained me.

When we stopped talking on Facebook, he sent me messages, then called, then emailed, then showed up. I thought he was always going to be able to find me, until I left the country.

When we were first dating he showed me his penis without my consent.

He didn't like my friends and in the end, it was my friends who saved me.
